

Gender Differences in Australian Political Parties*

Sabrina Kreyzerman

May 11, 2026

Gender disparities among political candidates, within and across political parties, are not novel. Using data sourced from the Australian Electoral Commission (AEC), this analysis highlights the stark difference in female and male political candidates in the Australian House of Representatives. In a positive light, this paper will also support that there have been recent advancements in the number of female Australian political candidates serving as Members of Parliament, for instance, through gender quotas within parties.

Table of contents

1	Introduction	2
2	Methodology	2
2.1	Data Collection	2
3	Findings	2
4	Discussion	4
5	Exclusions & Future Research	5
6	Conclusion	5
7	References	5

*Code and data from this analysis are available at: https://github.com/sabrinakreyzerman-k/Donaldson_Paper_Gender_in_Australian_Elections.

1 Introduction

Introduction goes here.

2 Methodology

2.1 Data Collection

Data Collection & Methodology goes here.

3 Findings

Findings goes here.

For more information, see our Table 1.

Table 1: Number of MPs broken down by gender and party

Gender	Party	Number of MPs	Percentage of MPs
female	Labor	128	8.74
female	Liberals	78	5.32
male	Labor	767	52.35
male	Liberals	492	33.58

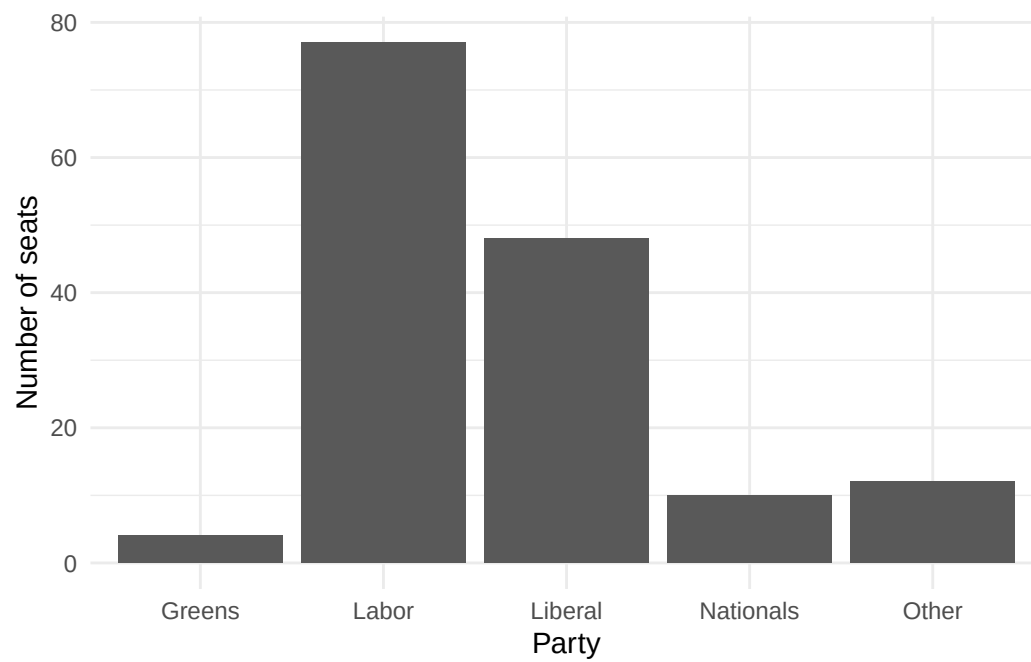

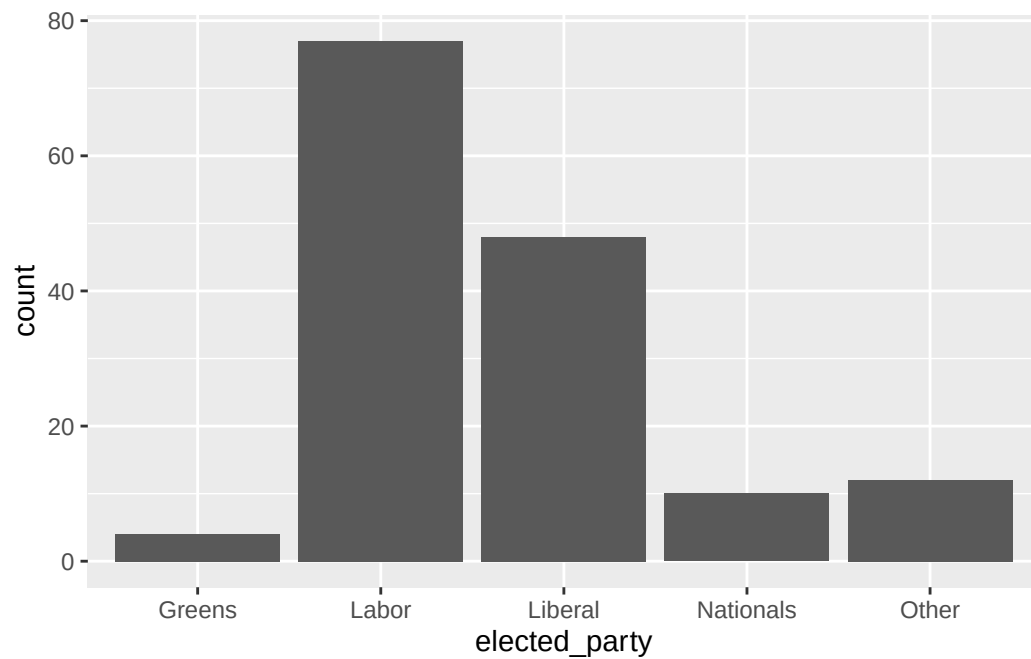

```
A tibble: 151 x 2
  Division Party
  <int> <chr>
1       1 National
2       2 Liberal
3       3 Liberal
4       4 Liberal
5       5 Green
6       6 Labor
7       7 National
8       8 Liberal
9       9 National
10      10 National
i 141 more rows
```

```
[1] "division_nm" "party_nm"

[1] "Australian Labor Party"
[2] "Liberal"
[3] "Liberal National Party of Queensland"
[4] "The Greens"
[5] "The Nationals"
[6] "Independent"
[7] "Katter's Australian Party (KAP)"
[8] "Centre Alliance"
```

```
A tibble: 6 x 2
  division elected_party
  <chr>      <chr>
1 Adelaide Labor
2 Aston     Liberal
3 Ballarat Labor
4 Banks     Liberal
5 Barker    Liberal
6 Barton    Labor
```

```
A tibble: 5 x 2
  elected_party n
  <chr>      <int>
1 Greens         4
2 Labor        77
3 Liberal       48
4 Nationals     10
5 Other        12
```

4 Discussion

Discussion goes here.

5 Exclusions & Future Research

One variable I chose to exclude from my data set was the age of political candidates. This decision was made because my objective with this analysis was to zero-in on the implications of gender within and across political parties. There is research to support that age is also at the forefront of considerations taken by voters when exercising their electoral rights (...). This is a compelling site for future study. While beyond the scope of my analysis, future research can look to advance Future research can focus on how age either increases or decreases chances of election, why voters may be deterred or compelled by younger or older candidates, and how age impacts electoral results domestically and cross-nationally.

6 Conclusion

Conclusion goes here.

7 References